

Guo Lingling, Ph.D. candidate, associate professor, and Deputy-Director of the Nursing School of JSMC, was born in 1981. She graduated from Fudan University with a master's degree in nursing in December 2015. Since 2021, she has been pursuing a Ph.D. in Health Science at Management and Science University (MSU) of Malaysia. During the entire career, she has been engaged in nursing education and clinical nursing practice. She has presided over more than ten municipal and college level programs and projects. As the first author, she has published 15 papers, in which 8 are SCI-level papers. She has patented one national utility model patent and won the third prize of the Science and Technology Award in 2017 from Health Commission of Zhejiang Province. She has won more than ten awards in national, provincial, and municipal competitions. In 2019, she won the second prize in the Teaching Ability Competition for Higher Vocational College Teachers organized by the Ministry of Education of China. She has also tutored students to win second and third prizes in National Vocational College Skills Competition of Nursing, and first and second prizes in Zhejiang Provincial Vocational College Skills Competition of Nursing.

He Shuzhi, master, associate professor/deputy chief nurse, was born in 1965. She graduated from Southeast University with a master's degree in Public Health in November 2014. She is currently the academic leader of the Midwifery specialty of JSMC, and serves as the Deputy Secretary-General of the Yancheng Nursing Association and the Deputy Director of the Nursing Professional Education Committee. She has previously held positions such as Director of the Nursing Department at Funing People's Hospital, and Director of the Nursing School of JSMC. She has been long engaged in clinical nursing, nursing management, and nursing education, presided over six programs and projects for the construction of high-level nursing professionals at provincial level and above. She has been the chief editor for six textbooks, published more than 20 papers, and served four times as the judge for the National Skills Competition of Nursing. She has won six awards for Outstanding Guidance Teacher in national and provincial skills competitions, two national and provincial teaching achievement awards, and three guidance awards for the second and third prizes in the "Challenge Cup" — Provincial College Student Innovation and Entrepreneurship Competition. She has also obtained four national utility model patents.

Lyu Ying, Ph.D. candidate, associate professor, Deputy-Dean of the Department of Teaching Affairs of JSMC, was born in 1983. She graduated from Soochow University with a master's degree in Pharmacology in June 2020. Since then, she has mainly been engaged in nursing education and clinical nursing practice. She has won the first prize in the Jiangsu Provincial Vocational Colleges Teachers' Teaching Ability Competition and served as the leader of the innovative team of vocational teachers in Jiangsu Province. She has been awarded the model woman teacher, the innovation expert, the technical expert of Yancheng City. She also serves as the Deputy Director of Yancheng's Elderly Nursing Committee, and the head of the first "Most Beautiful Teacher" of JSMC. She has received various awards and scholarships such as the "Xie Jiakai Couple Scholarship" and the "N4A Scholarship". She has served as the chief editor or associate editor of more than 10 textbooks, including "Geriatric Nursing" and "Community Nursing", published over ten papers as the first author, obtained three national utility model patents, and has received the first prize in JSMC's teaching achievement award multiple times.

Zhang Zhenzhen, master, associate researcher, Deputy-Dean of the HR Department of JSMC, was born in 1981. She graduated from Shenzhen University with a master's degree in Applied Psychology in June 2011. Since then, she has been engaged in vocational education management. She has presided over four projects at the municipal levels, published seven journal papers, obtained four authorized patents, and served as the associate editor of two published books. She has also received one second prize in the Jiangsu Provincial Teaching Achievement Award.

Wu Huaping, master, associate professor, was born in 1983. She graduated from Nanjing Medical University with a master's degree in Nursing in December 2018. Since then, she has been engaged in nursing education and clinical nursing practice, and has been recognized as excellent in annual assessments multiple times. She has presided over six municipal and college level programs and projects, and published 10 papers in journals at the provincial level and above as the first author. She has also won a total of nine awards in provincial, municipal, and college level teaching and skills competitions, including one first prize. Additionally, she has obtained five national utility model patents and has supervised one project for Jiangsu Provincial College Students' Innovation and Entrepreneurship Program.